soil science with its roots in both the plant sciences and geology first carne into being as a recognizable discipline in response to questions conceming plant growth the chemical and physical characteristics of the soil as well as landscape processes that controlled those characteristics were of great interest to agronomists horticulturists geographers geomorphologists and geologists some of whom drifted into one another s orbit and over the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries brought their experiences and talents together to form the nucleus of soil science in those early years a perception developed that soil science was simply an agricultural and edaphological science which indeed it was in large measure however pervasive and stubborn that perception was there has been from the beginning a segment of the community of soil scientists that has maintained an interest in soil science writ large these soil scientists while continuing to interact with agronomists horticulturists and foresters have maintained communications collaborations and linkages with such disciplines as geology geomorphology geography land use planning and engineering in the second half of the twentieth century soil science has expanded its contacts with these nonagricultural disciplines and now finds itself addressing a much wider range of problems questions and issues than it did in the first half of the century in response to a growing demand for information nonagricultural land uses increasingly have been the focus of soil studies and of the development of soil interpretations and other decision tools for land users best known for his notorious rivers of blood speech in 1968 and his outspoken opposition to immigration enoch powell was one of the most controversial figures in british political life in the second half of the twentieth century and a formative influence on what came to be known as thatcherism telling the story of powell s political life from the 1950s onwards paul corthorn s intellectual biography goes beyond a fixation on the rivers of blood speech to bring us a man who thought deeply about and often took highly unusual and sometimes apparently contradictory positions on the central political debates of the post 1945 era denying the existence of the cold war at one stage going so far as to advocate the idea of an alliance with the soviet union advocating free market economics long before it was fashionable while remaining a staunch defender of the idea of a national health service vehemently opposing british membership of the european economic community arguing for the closer integration of northern ireland with the rest of the uk and in the 1980s supporting the campaign for unilateral nuclear disarmament in the process powell emerges as more than just a deeply divisive figure but as a seminal political intellectual of his time paying particular attention to the revealing inconsistencies in powell s thought and the significant ways in which his thinking changed over time corthorn argues that powell s diverse campaigns can nonetheless still be understood as a coherent whole if viewed as part of a long running and wide ranging debate set against the backdrop of the long term decline in britain s international military and economic position in the decades after 1945
