in this third volume of the series research on education in africa the caribbean and the middle east the volume continues with the previously established overarching purpose of publishing chapters that are based upon research conducted in those regions by scholars many of whom are indigenous to the regions they write about and are therefore able to provide cultural insights about relevant issues as well as nonindigenous scholars who have conducted their studies in countries within the regions or about those regions this mixture of indigenous scholarship offering emic perspectives and outside scholarship offering etic perspectives continues to be a relative strength and uniqueness of this book series in addition several chapters in the current volume constitute collaborations between the authors etic and emic to the contexts about which they write this bifocality in the gaze cast upon issues covered in this book series has been well received by readers of earlier volumes of the series almost every educational idea worth a thought has been considered at the university of illinois and anything worth trying has been tested in this history of ideas bill cope and walter feinberg chronicle the intellectual lives of education thinkers at the university while tracking the development of educational ideas and practices in general cope and feinberg draw on conversations narratives and archival research that reveal how different generations explored their role in defining and carrying out the college s multifaceted mission their account raises critical questions about the character of learning the aims of teaching and the nature of teaching as a profession at the same time the authors address issues that range from the role of schools in fostering individual and collective identity to the introduction of computer mediated and online learning cope and feinberg examine changes in self understanding about fundamental ideas and chart how the college evolved from its original narrow mission of training children s schoolteachers to embracing global perspectives a wide ranging portrait of an institution arguments for learning uses the school of education to tell the stories of thinkers dedicated to the idea that education can change the world for the better with critical issues like desegregation and funding facing our schools dissatisfaction with public education has reached a new high teachers decry inadequate resources while critics claim educators are more concerned with job security than effective teaching though urban education has reached crisis proportions contending players have difficulty agreeing on a common program of action this book tells why changing urban education confronts the prevailing naivete in school reform by examining the factors that shape reinforce or undermine reform efforts edited by one of the nation's leading urban scholars it examines forces for change and resistance in urban education and proposes that the barrier to reform can only be overcome by understanding how schools fit into the broader political contexts of their cities much of the problem with our schools lies with the reluctance of educators to recognize the profoundly political character of public education the contributors show how urban political contexts vary widely with factors like racial composition the role of the teachers union and relations between cities and surrounding metropolitan areas presenting case studies of original field research in baltimore chicago houston and six other urban areas they consider how resistance to desegregation and the concentration of the poor in central urban areas affect education and they suggest how cities can build support for reform through the involvement of business and other community players by demonstrating the complex interrelationship between urban education and politics this book shows schools to be not just places for educating children but also major employers and large spenders of tax dollars it also introduces the concept of civic capacity the ability of educators and non educators to work together on common goals and suggests that this key issue must be addressed before education can be improved changing urban education makes it clear to educators that the outcome of reform efforts depends heavily on their political context as it reminds political scientists that education is a major part of the urban mix while its prognosis is not entirely optimistic it sets forth important guidelines that cannot be ignored if our schools are to successfully prepare children for the future
