The content industries consider digital rights management (DRM) to contend with unauthorized downloading of copyrighted material, a practice that costs artists and distributors massively in lost revenue. Based on two conferences that brought together high-profile specialists in this area—scientists, lawyers, academics, and business practitioners—this book presents a broad, well-balanced, and objective approach that covers the entire DRM spectrum, reflecting the interdisciplinary nature of the field. The book is structured using three different perspectives that cover the technical, legal, and business issues. This monograph-like anthology is the first consolidated book on this young topic.

A modern American tall tale woven by a girl and her father about Ah Bing, the Chinese immigrant behind the Pacific Northwest's most delicious cherries you've heard of—a Bing cherry—but did you know the story of the Chinese American immigrant for whom the dark luscious cherry is named? Long ago, Ah Bing was a father who travelled across the sea from China looking for work. It was in Oregon where he met a man who hired him to work in his orchards, where eventually Bing cultivated the delicious cherries we know of today. But what was it that made this man and the cherries he made so special? A young girl wonders as she sits together with her father, enjoying cherries from their backyard, weaving together cultural memory, historical fact, and her own imagination. The young girl imagines a narrative of Ah Bing that is as larger than life and as sweet as his namesake. With touching text and lush illustrations, Livia Blackburne and Julia Kuo forge an unforgettable Chinese American folktale that has largely been untold. The backmatter includes a letter from the author and illustrator, as well as a recipe.
