argues that there is a common inability to connect ideas and decisions between politicians and those responsible for managing public sector organisations and discusses in detail the initiatives launched in the uk to establish a new approach to management particularly next steps and executive agencies by analysing public sector management in a number of countries since the reforms of the 1980s this valuable book examines past problems and suggests future improvements to the ways in which public services should be managed including the development of relations between politicians and officials and ways to improve decision taking and management for government as a senior official in mrs thatcher s government the author describes in detail and from the inside the process of planning and introducing executive agencies a major change in one of the largest governments in the world she emphasises the intense difficulty involved in getting agreement to change and to implement decisions discussing the problems of conflicting objectives between politicians and officials in dealing with the practicalities of managing large public sector institutions the uk experience of executive agencies has been influential across the world and in many countries this book describes how the uk system was devised and introduced this book will appeal to an international spectrum of academics and students especially those involved in public sector reform and public sector management and political decision taking it will also be of great interest to contemporary historians of the thatcher period and beyond as well as politicians and commentators concerned with government reform public sector management and the role of politicians

this first volume of the official history of the uk civil service covers its evolution from the northcote trevelyan report of 1854 to the first years of mrs thatcher s government in 1981 despite current concerns with good governance and policy delivery little serious attention has been paid to the institution vital to both the civil service this official history is designed to remedy this by placing present problems in historical context and by providing a helpful structure in which others and particularly former officials may contribute to the debate starting with the seminal 1854 northcote trevelyan report it covers the lost opportunity of the 1940s when the service failed to adapt the needs of big government as advocated by beveridge and keynes it then examines in greater detail the belated attempts at modernisation in the 1960s the service s vilification in the 1970s and the final destruction of the old order during the first years of mrs thatcher s government particular light is shed on the origins of such current concerns as the role of special advisers the need for a prime minister's department the evolution of parliamentary select committees to resolve the potential tension between bureaucracy and parliamentary democracy this official history is based on extensive research into both recently released and unreleased papers as well as interviews with leading participants it has important lessons to offer all those both inside and outside the uk seeking to improve the quality of democratic government this book will be of great interest to all students of british history british government and politics and of public administration in general
