the library of Étienne gaudet has preoccupied scholars in the field of medieval history and philosophy it arose the interest of palmon glorieux who misattributed some of the manuscripts from this library to jean de falisca the error was later corrected by znon kaluza in his seminal work dedicated to thomas of cracow what the present volume brings on top of the research already dedicated to the subject comes from the fact that our methodology if heavily influenced by the insight that most of what this library transmits consists of notes keeping that in mind we have been able to discover fragments of texts that had been considered lost correctly identify lesser known figures mentioned in these manuscripts or at least challenge old identifications and understand some doctrinal aspects from a different perspective another important issue that comes to light in the present volume is the way Étienne gaudet used and reused his notes wrote tables to retrieve them abbreviated texts from other authors and drafted his own works this volume will be relevant to the scholar studying medieval academic practices of the late fourteenth century since it introduces them to new and exciting materials that are a direct testimony of what happened in the proverbial classroom it will also be of extreme interest to scholars who study the practice of note taking and for whom the middle ages have not yet been very generous the thirteenth century saw such a proliferation of new encyclopedic texts that more than one scholar has called it the century of the encyclopedias variously referred to as a speculum thesaurus or imago mundi the term encyclopedia was not commonly applied to such books until the eighteenth century these texts were organized in such a way that a reader could easily locate a collection of authoritative statements on any given topic because they reproduced rather than simply summarized parts of prior texts these compilations became libraries in miniature in this groundbreaking study mary franklin brown examines writings in latin catalan and french that are connected to the encyclopedic movement vincent of beauvais s speculum maius ramon llull s libre de meravelles arbor scientiae and arbre de filosofia d amor and jean de meun s continuation of the roman de la rose franklin brown analyzes the order of knowledge in these challenging texts describing the wide
